The National Merit Scholarship Program is an academic competition for recognition and college undergraduate scholarships. Taking the PSAT in a student's junior year serves as the route of entry to the National Merit Scholarship Program. Approximately 50,000 students nationwide become Commended Scholars; approximately 16,000 of those become Semifinalists and 8,000 continue to become Finalists. Awards are presented by the National Merit Corporation, corporate sponsors, or participating universities and can range from five-hundred dollars to an amount which covers all college costs for undergraduate studies.

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

February 27, 2009

I am delighted to join your family, friends, and community in congratulating you on receiving the President's Education Award. By earning this honor, you have shown a deep personal commitment to educational excellence and I commend you for your hard work.

Nothing is more important to our Nation's long-term success than educating our future leaders. Your commitment to learning will help you meet the educational and professional demands in your future and will help lead America to a better day.

I am confident that you will build on this achievement as you strive for even higher goals in the future. I wish you all the best for continued success in the years ahead.
