MAHS Teacher to Train Others on Class Response Systems

Moon Area High School Math teacher Katy Smith will be a presenter at The Promethean Conference on March 3 at Mars Area High School.

Smith's presentation will focus on how to use class response systems (also known as 'clickers') for beginners. The clickers are part of a class response system in which each student can answer a question and the results will show up on the promethean board. One can look at the class results as a whole, or look at each student individually to help with formative assessment.

"I hope to bring this technology into each department anyone may teach," said Smith. "I want to show the benefits and how easy they are to use."
